International BLS Day - 15 April 2020

Non Communicable Diseases: The role of Biomedical Laboratory Scientists in Detection, Screening and Treatment.

BLS Day is a wonderful opportunity to promote public awareness of the contributions made by the profession as it relates to health care.

IFBLS encourages members to support BLS Day with virtual online celebrations. Share your celebrations for all to see on social media!

Posters are available for download on the IFBLS website.

34th World Congress 2020 COVID-19 Update

With IFBLS Congress 2020 due to take place 1 - 5 September, Congress Organisers are working hard to maximise preparations in order to make it a great success despite uncertainties induced by the COVID-19 situation.

The Organising Committee is closely monitoring the situation with daily reports from the WHO, the Danish Health Authority, and other national authorities.

As this is a developing situation kindly stay updated by visiting the Congress website for further information in the months and weeks leading up to IFBLS 2020.

We hope that the situation improves and we look forward to welcoming you in Copenhagen.

Behind every COVID-19 test there are biomedical laboratory scientists at all levels working at the heart of healthcare. We are so proud of our members right now.
